GAUDÍ TAKES TO THE STAGE IN A NEW CATALAN-LANGUAGE MUSICAL FOR ALL AUDIENCES

‘Gaudí: The Awakening of a Genius’ will run at Teatre Poliorama from 15 November to 24 January

Produced by Trílope and co-created with Casa Batlló, the show invites audiences to discover the architect’s childhood and the origins of his creativity

Casa Batlló brings Antoni Gaudí to the theatre for the first time as part of Gaudí Year 2026

A diverse live score and large-scale set design reflect Gaudí’s universe in a “trencadís” of different styles

Estel Aparicio, Irene Jòdar, Albert Triola and Natalia Revilla are among the nine-strong cast of actors and musicians

© David Ruano

Barcelona, 18 September 2026

On Sunday, 15 November, Barcelona will welcome one of the major cultural events of Gaudí Year: Gaudí: The Awakening of a Genius, an original, large-scale musical production for audiences of all ages, inviting them on a journey through the celebrated architect's childhood and formative years to discover the origins of his creativity. Produced by Trílope and co-created with Casa Batlló, the show will run at Teatre Poliorama until 24 January 2027. Tickets are now on sale.

A journey through the story of an extraordinary creator

Based on real events, Gaudí: The Awakening of a Genius offers an original and moving look at the early years of the world-renowned architect. Through live music, humour, fantasy and an innovative, large-scale staging, the show reveals how a child whose life was marked by illness and who was fascinated by nature began to develop the sensitivity and creativity that would ultimately transform architecture around the world. As the show's director, Cristina Estarelles, explains: "We have moved away from the monumental image of the genius to focus on the child behind it, helping us understand how his unique way of seeing the world came into being. It is also a story about overcoming adversity and the ability to turn difficulties into opportunities."

The production combines different musical genres in a true "sonic trencadís", blending pop, rock, classical music and traditional Catalan songs, among other styles. Musical director and arranger Asier Olabarrieta explains: "The music reflects Gaudí's universe. We have created a true sound trencadís in which very different styles, rhythms and sounds coexist, just as Gaudí combined seemingly impossible materials, shapes and colours to create a harmonious whole. The score is also a journey through the imagination of a child discovering his talent." The production features a cast of nine performers, including musicians and actors, seven of whom are also solo singers. Their versatility brings as many as eighteen different instruments to the stage, performed live within a dynamic production built around instrumental rotation. The cast comprises Estel Aparicio, Irene Jòdar, Andreu Domènech, Albert Triola, Núria Masip, Natalia Revilla, Arnau Prats, Asier Olabarrieta and Lara Streccia, with Lluís Soler providing the voice-over.

A special moment: Gaudí Year

2026 is an extraordinary year for Casa Batlló, marking the centenary of Antoni Gaudí's death. As part of the Gaudí Year programme, the cultural institution is symbolically stepping beyond the walls of its iconic Modernisme building on Passeig de Gràcia to share the architect's legacy in a new realm: the performing arts.

“Preserving Antoni Gaudí’s legacy does not simply mean talking about architecture. We are constantly looking for new ways to tell his story to new audiences and new generations. After welcoming millions of visitors from around the world, co-creating this show gives us the opportunity to connect with local audiences too. We are thrilled to be doing so at the Poliorama, in the heart of Barcelona, and to introduce audiences not only to the universally acclaimed genius, but also to the curious and observant child behind his work,” explains Gary Gautier, General Manager of Casa Batlló.

Teatre Poliorama, which welcomes the production at another particularly special moment as it celebrates its 30th anniversary, highlights the artistic scope of the project: an original Catalan-language production featuring live music and an ambitious stage design. According to Anna Victori, manager and partner at the Poliorama, “we are delighted that, in such a special year both for Gaudí and for the Poliorama, this inspiring human story is coming to Barcelona on our stage.” She also emphasises that “the show has been conceived so that children and adults can enjoy it from different perspectives,” an approach that fits perfectly with the theatre’s commitment to programming for audiences of all ages, which has made it a benchmark in the sector.

Gaudí: The Awakening of a Genius had its preview at Teatre Fortuny in Reus on 26 June, with both the location and date carefully chosen for their connection to Antoni Gaudí: close to his roots and between the anniversaries of his death and birth (he died on 10 June 1926 and was born on 25 June 1852).

Tickets are now available on the Teatre Poliorama website. Recommended for ages 6 and over.

Press room

Download all press materials for the show

Press contacts

TEATRE POLIORAMA
Núria Cañamares
ncanyamares@gmail.com
677 05 32 68

CASA BATLLÓ
Ingrid Olmo
ingridolmo@casabatllo.cat
670 02 85 13